Excerpt: . . . critical to increasing the relevance and therefore the usefulness of performance information to their day-to-day activities. The practice of building analytical capacity to use performance Developing Agency information - both in terms of staff trained to do analysis and availability Capacity of research and evaluation resources - is critical to using performance information in a meaningful fashion. Such capacity can be enhanced by training to develop the competencies and skills of managers to plan strategically, develop robust measures of performance, and analyze what the performance data mean. Performance management literature also states that training is a key factor in improving employees capabilities and enabling employee involvement in achieving performance improvements. Improving the communication of performance information among staff Communicating and stakeholders can facilitate the use of performance information by Performance Information agency managers. Improvements can be achieved through frequent and Frequently and Effectively routine communication, and the use of effective communication tools, such as visual aids. Frequent, regular communication is key for managers to inform staff and other stakeholders of their commitment to achieve the agencys goals and to keep these goals in mind as they pursue their day-to-day activities. Frequently reporting performance information also allows managers to review the information in time to take action to make improvements. Program managers can also communicate performance information upward through the management hierarchy, and across operating units. Vehicles for such communication include poster displays, performance scorecards, intranet sites, e-mail, and distribution of monthly performance-review meeting minutes. As noted above, to better understand what may hinder use of performance Agenci. . . This item ships from La Vergne,TN. Paperback.
