Not illustrated. 1886 Excerpt: .modulus E_2 for the ends AF and CG, it will follow by the geometric theorem, that the area ABD will be to the area AFK as E_2 is to $2J$, because the slope at A is common to both curves. But again, if the inequality of modulus takes place in the other direction, i.e. if the modulus in one flange of the strut is throughout greater than in the other flange, it will follow that the area ABD must be greater than the area AFK (or vice versa) by a constant quantity. In the latter case, the reduction of strength in short columns would be relatively greater Fig. 12. than in long columns; and a very short column with fixed ends would be theoretically less strong than a similar column with round ends. For practical purposes, however, the limiting effect of these contingencies, as well as that of imperfect fixity of the ends, may roughly be covered by taking the effective length of the bow AC, as equal to six-tenths of the total length FG; and the diagrams for the theoretical limits of fixed-ended columns are accordingly constructed as parallel projections of the curves for round-ended columns. Cast-iron Columns.--The average value of the modulus of elasticity in cast-iron, is about 14,000,000 lbs., and therefore for the ideal cast-iron column, $p = 14,000,000 r^2 \div j$; while the variation, commonly observed in the modulus of different specimens, bears nearly the same proportion to the...
