THEORETICAL AND PRACTICAL MEDICINE, Art. I. A Letter to the Right Honourable Sir Joseph Banks, Bart. P. R. S. on the Causes and Removal of the prevailing Discontents, Imperfections, and Abuses, in Medicine; from Thomas Beddoes, M. D. 8vo. pp. 147. Phillips. . ABOUT three years ago, several physicians formed themselves into an association, under the patronage of the President of the Royal Society, for the purpose of inquiring Into the numerous abuses that prevail in the practice of medicine, of considering what remedies were best calculated to remove them, and of procuring the assistance of the legislature, if necessary, for enforcing any scheme which they might judge it expedient to propose. Convinced of the existence of the evils in question, and of the expediency of a reform in all the branches of the art, we beheld, with great satisfaction, the establishment of such a society; though we could not help feeling some degree of anxiety as to the result Of their deliberations, from observing that its most active members belonged to the class of irregularly educated physicians, whom they were desirous to interdict from attaining, in future, the higher honours of the profession; and from not being. able to discover, in any of their publications, the marks of much profound reflection or very comprehensive views. Unfortunately our apprehensions proved to be too well founded; for the grand scheme which this learned body, after frequent meetings, after circulating...
