Oh dear, Mr. Ames! cried Natalie, in distress, we will feel as if we are at sea without a rudder. The remark pleased the farmer, for he was proud of his experience and loved to have others admit it. So he said: Well, ef I git time I 160 might run in at noon when I drives to the store fer mail and house-goods. Please do! We will need you by that time, I am sure, replied Natalie. But the seeds and corn and other vegetable products were planted without further mistakes or delay. Each day saw the work advance and by the time the city school closed the garden was well on its way to producing edibles for that season. The tiny lettuce slips that Mr. Ames s brother had given Natalie were growing up fresh and green; the radishes showed three to four sturdy little leaves, evidence...
