Not illustrated. 1900 Excerpt: . . . moon-silverd roll; For self-poised they live, nor pine with noting All the fever of some differing soul. Bounded by themselves, and unregardful In what state Gods other works may be, In their own tasks all their powers pouring, These attain the mighty life you see. O air-born voice! long since, severely clear, A cry like thine in mine own heart I hear: Resolve to be thyself: and know, that he Who finds himself loses his misery. Professor William James, of Harvard, in his text-book on psychology, says: Could the young but realize how soon they will become mere walking bundles of habits, they would give more heed to their conduct while in the plastic state. Every smallest stroke of virtue or of vice leaves its scar. The drunken Rip Van Winkle in Jeffersons play, excuses himself for every fresh dereliction by saying, I wont count this time. Well, he may not count it, and a kind heaven may not count it, but it is being counted none the less. Down among his nerve cells and fibres the molecules are counting it, registering and storing it up, to be used against him when the next temptation comes. Nothing we ever do is, in strict, scientific literalness, wiped out. Of course, this has its good side as well as its bad one. As we become permanent drunkards by so many separate drinks, so we become saints in the moral, and authorities and experts in the practical and scientific...
