Excerpt: . . . e study by Brown University Associate Professor, Dr. Joan Teno, based on interviews with bereaved families of nursing home residents reported that half of those patients experienced pain at end- of-life while two-thirds of those families rated the pain as severe more than half the time. Indeed, we have a lot of work to do with respect to the management of pain and we have to recognize that OxyContin is an important part of that management regime in some cases. During todays hearing I hope we can gain a better understanding of the promotion and marketing practices of OxyContin and whether or not these activities have contributed to the extensive abuse of this drug and whether or not Federal agencies responsible for approving narcotics require additional authority in light of these new challenges. We will gain an insight into the devastation that illegal use of this drug has caused in many rural parts of America and how those areas are working to fight back. I also hope...
